

Supporting creative music making with new communities in London

Join Fairbeats and Abimaro Gunnell for a morning of training on working with young refugees and asylum seekers through music.

Wednesday 10th July, 10am - 1pm at Deptford Lounge, 9 Giffin St, Deptford, London SE8 4RJ.

Abimaro has worked with Fairbeats over a number of years, initially as a workshop leader and more recently offering training and support to our team. On July 10th she will lead a training session about instigating and supporting creative music making with a particular focus on the work she has done in community settings with young Londoners who attend Action for Refugees in Lewisham.

It will be a chance to meet with some of the Fairbeats team as well as hear more about our work. The morning will consist of useful guided practical activities for attendees in order to develop your work as a music facilitator.

To book your place please or for more information on the event, please contact Jenna Mackle at jenna.fairbeats@gmail.com

Price: £15.00*

*We don't want the price to be a barrier for anyone wishing to attend. Please contact Jenna Mackle if you are interested in coming and would like to discuss a reduced price.

Abimaro Gunnell

Abimaro is a singer song-writer and music leader from London. She will be releasing her most recent work in August of this year. Having previously lent her vocals to bands such as Zero 7, Cinematic Orchestra and The Free, Abimaro is also a Music Facilitator, regularly leading projects for organisations including The Roundhouse, Spitalfields music & The Albany. Chosen for her art led approach to music, Abimaro was profiled as one of the subject artists in the much acclaimed 2017 exhibition by Hassan Hajjaj 'La Caravane' at Somerset House. Abimaro is also currently exhibiting her sound installation collaboration with artist Lakwena Maciver, 'Sing me high, sing me low, bring me back, let me go' in New York's The Colour Factory (www.colorfactory.co/). She is inspired by life, faith and stories. Find links to her music on instagram - @abimaro
